Superstructure with specialized DNA

The building only resembles concrete. Beneath painted stucco is a steel, wood, Glulam and shear-wall structure designed for long-span gallery use, heavy installations and controlled operations.

Engineered superstructure

Steel superstructure with aluminum and wood framing - a growth-capable shell intended for long-term use.

Glulam beams & shear walls

Long open spans, engineered strength and seismic load transfer to the foundation.

Engineered hanging points

Approximately 12+ threaded-rod points, reportedly engineered for up to 5,000 lb each.

Gallery-grade art storage

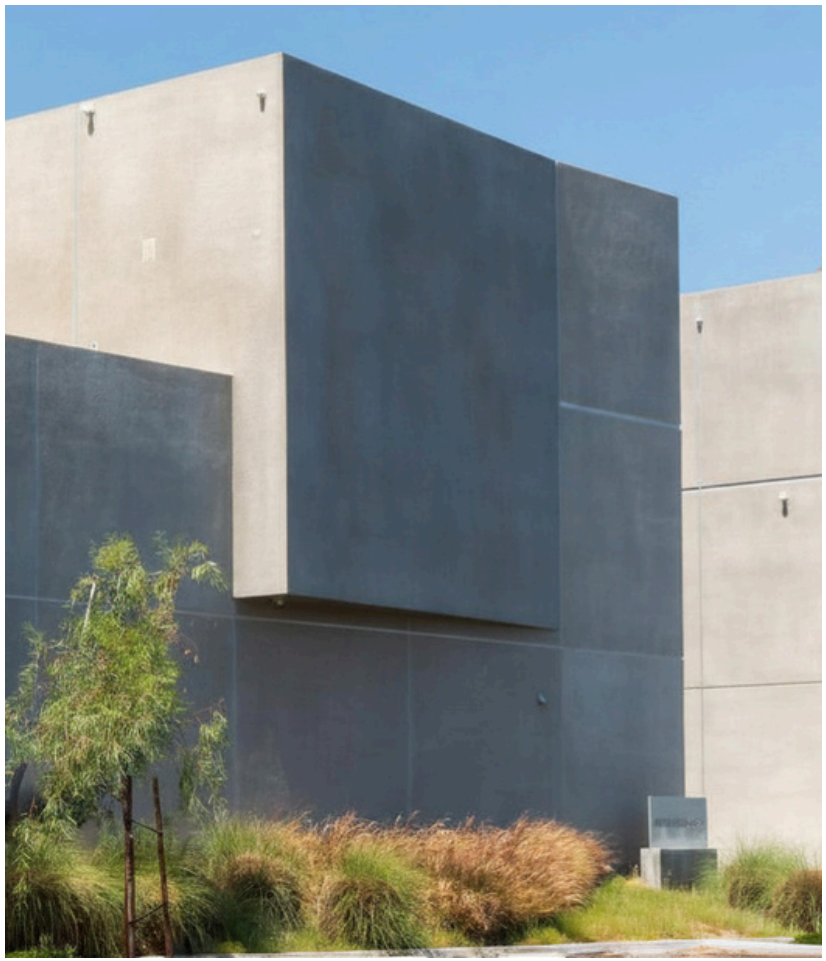

Rack coverage and protected back-of-house storage logic for significant works.

Climate-conscious service zones

Garage, storage, shipping and receiving were temperature-regulated by original split systems.

Reinforced terrace

Designed for heavy bronze, steel and stone installations with double-door crane placement.

Owner-provided facts; buyer to verify with structural and building consultants.
